Bio

Marcia's practice encompasses a wide range of matters, including family law, estate planning, real estate and civil litigation. Marcia has successfully navigated her clients through all phases of the litigation process, including pleadings, discovery, motions, arbitrations and trials, and has extensive experience in alternative dispute resolution. In addition to her litigation work, Marcia is also experienced in various transactional work.

Prior to joining Inslee Best, Marcia worked as a summer associate during law school and completed her articles at a prominent family law firm in Ontario, Canada. During law school, Marcia was involved in Pro Bono Students Canada, and was a founding member of Diversity and Law Society—a student organization committed to promoting diversity and multiculturalism within the study and practice of law—and was also an editor of the Alberta Law Review. Upon moving to Seattle in 2019, Marcia completed her Master of Laws at the University of Washington and thereafter joined a boutique family law firm in Seattle.

Marcia is licensed to practice in both Ontario, Canada and Washington, providing a unique perspective to clients and their matters.
